Introduction to Early Payout

Early Payout is a feature that allows bettors to receive their winnings before the event ends. It is also known as "Early Payout" or "Anticipated Payment", allowing bettors to secure their profits before the game ends.

Early Payout on 2 up: What is it and how does it work?

In the context of the 2 up platform, Early Payout applies to bets placed on the winning team. This means that if you bet on a team that you believe will win, and the Early Payout feature is activated, you will receive your winnings even before the game ends.

Even if the game ends with a victory for the chosen team, the payment will be made only once.

The Early Payout tax is calculated based on various factors, including the game flow, the remaining time in the game, the current odds, and the historical odds. During the game, the odds can vary depending on how the game is developing. This means that if the chosen team is winning by a large margin, the Early Payout tax will be lower, while if the game is more balanced, the tax will be higher.
