The show has been removed from the FIFA 22, kept in Football Manager

EA Electronic Arts (EA) announced that the player Mason Greenwood was removed from the game FIFA 22. EA said that the company "supports fully all the measures that the police and the football clubs can take to ensure the well-being of the players" Greenwood was accused of assault and threatened with assault in January and has been suspended since then

Although EA has removed the player from FIFA 22, the company's game Football Manager still has Greenwood in its game. Football Manager is a computer game developed by Sports Interactive. Although Football Manager is not a traditional football game, it still has players and teams licensed.

At the moment, Greenwood still appears in Football Manager as a player of Manchester United. Despite this, the changes in FIFA 22 should be noted for those who still play the EA game.

The players who were in the EA game had to be moved to other teams. Greenwood had to be moved to other teams to continue playing.

The most popular football app in the world (FIFA Mobile) is free to play. The players buy or earn money in the game to buy cards to
